he would not, as Governor of Massachusetts, sand it with his presence. (Cheers.) He would consider himself recreant to his duty were he not to meet on an escasion like this with his friends to give utterance to his sentiments. He referred to the occasion when exator Summer last addressed the citizens of Boston com this rostrum against himself (Gardae:), who was then the candidate of an opposite party to that to which Mr. Summer belonged, and he thanked the committee by requesting bim to preside on this occasion, had an opportunity to rise superior to party judice. While Mr. Sumner is in the Senate he would all in his power and ability to strengthen his arm and aid him in his professional duties. (Renewed cheers.) In years gone by outrages have been committed in Con this is the first time that a Senator has been struck down in his seat in the Senate chamber. We now call upon se to expel the assailant from the hails of Go gress. (Cheers.) The Governor animadverted briefly upon the harsh invective and opprobrium that prevailed among all parties, which, to some ex ent, has engendered the hister personal feelings between opposing political

Be said the question before us was, shall a Senato from Massachusetts be deated the indugence in debate and in the same manner, that sixty other Senators are allowed? The Governor then alluded to the speech of Mr. Rumter as being far less objectionable than many that have been made by others in the halls of Congress, and concluded by saying that when the just and equitable rights of our Massachusetts representatives were desired them, that he who would not rise in opposition to said proceedings is not worthy of the rights he enjoys. (Tremendous cheering)

The Primeinens then introduced Judge Russell, who (Tremendous cheering)
The President then introduced Judge Russell, who reed the following resolutions:—

Recolved, That we have beard with grief and indignation of the heutal asseutic committed upon our esteemed stonator. Charles Summer, for words spoken in cheate, and of the insuit. Recolved, That is the outrage we see now encroachments upon freedom, new violations of fister rights and a strange disregard of chivarious principles, while in the conduct of such mean as Seance Critication we giadly recognize prots of the home, of pure principles and of true particular. Becolved, That the stack is to be rebuiled, not only as a cowardly assent upon a defenceless man, but as a crime against the right of tree speech and the digaty of a free State.

Resolved, That, as American citizens, we despit innest the example of the proposition of the state of the proposition of the state of the

Col. A. D. Berwerer was reserved with hearty cheers. He said he was prepared to make a clean breast of it. (Cheers.) Under the flag of our country, floating over our natural Capitol, a Seastor of Massachusette had been cloven down by a dastardly coward. He trusted that a voice would go forth from Faneuil Hall to-night that would shake the country from battlement to foundation. (Cheers.) He have not what course others might take, but, as for Mm, give him liberty or give him death. (Enthustatic applause.) He also quote: the remark of Webs'er, that there was a blow to give as well as to take, and said, "If it comes to that, fellow citizens, I say, let it be war to the knife, and the knife to the hilt?" (Terrific cheers.) If the South want to play at that game, let her remember that two can play at the (Cheers, and to the teeth, and submit no more to such indignities as have been hesped upon her. (Repeated cheers, and aries of "Good, good.") He concluded by counselling firmness on our part, and when the time does come, the North would come out of the battle as she did in 'the times that tried men's souls—with victory perched upon her banners. His remarks throughout were warmly endorsed by the immense audience.
